2. Resume/ Research Interests

In 2015, I graduated from University of Salford Greater Manchester in the UK. I have joined the Hashemite University in the same year; I am currently an assistant professor of linguistics. My research interests lie general linguistic theory with particular focus on theoretical phonological and morphological approaches to language varieties. Recently, I developed an interest in acoustic and instrumental analysis of speech, dialectology and lexicography. Between 2015 and 2018, I have published a number of articles that fall within this scope.
