2. Resume/ Research Interests

In 2015, I graduated from University of Salford Manchester in the UK. I have joined the Hashemite University in the same year; I am currently an assistant professor of linguistics. My research interests lie in general linguistic theory with particular focus on theoretical phonological and morphological approaches to language varieties. Recently, I developed an interest in acoustic and instrumental analysis of [child] speech, dialectology and lexicography. Between 2015 and 2019, I have published articles that fall within this scope.

3. Areas of Expertise

- Phonological theory
- Acoustic and instrumental analysis of speech
- General theoretical issues in morphology, syntax, dialectology and lexicography
